Hike in water bills have Upland residents boiling

By DINAH ROSE

Staff Writer More than 20 residents in northeast Upland have filed complaints with the city regarding water bills that have jumped as much as eight times the amount of previous billings.

City officials blame the abnormally high totals on increased usage during the summer months, and the accumulated effects of estimated readings over several billing periods.

Assistant City Manager Mike Matlock said the meter reader responsible for that area was terminated Sept. 2, after officials in the finance department determined the man was not reading water meters accurately.

"Apparently he (the meter reader) was estimating usage for that area of the city," said Matlock, "and he estimated low over a period of several months.

"What we're getting is the accumulated effects of the lowreadings now that an accurate reading has been made in addition to summer being the highest use period of the year.

Mary Ann Warn, one of several neighbors living on Tapia Way who have contacted the city, does not accept Matlock's conclusions.

"I could understand if the bill doubled. This is the first summer our yard has been in and I expect the bill to be higher," she said. "But this last bill was more than we've paid for the entire year combined."

The Warns' water bill averaged about $23 for each two-month billing period since they moved into the house in June 1979. They were charged $174 for the period from June 17 to Aug. 20 this year.

Although the Warns had the highest bill on the street, other neighbors experienced similar

John and Florence Blakely had never paid more than $13 a month for their water bill until this last billing. Charges rose to more than $62 per month, or $125 for the twomonth period. Estelle Sanchez' previous bill was Ruth Land, of the city's finance department, averaged the water bills for 289 half-acre residential lots in the northeast area. She said water bills were about $60 during the same period, including both new homes and those that were more established with both front and back yards planted.

A meter reader was sent out this morning to check 30 more homes on the west side of Euclid Avenue in the same area, and found the average charge would be about $69.

Finance Director Tim Brown said homeowners who complained about the charges were being told that the

He added that many of the residents lived in new homes, and might be experiencing their first hot summer with a fully landscaped lot

The Tapia Way residents investigated the possibility of paying their bills to the Public Utilities Commission pending an investigation of the charges.

According to Carol Kretzer of the PUC, city-owned water companies are not under the jurisdiction of the commission, and the citizens' best recourse is to contact the city

Young museum worker proves invaluable asset

By DINAH ROSE Staff Writer

Five years ago, a skinny kid from Pioneer Junior High School wandered over after class to the museum neighboring his school.

He was fascinated by the memorabilia, Indian artifacts, and vast collections from all over the world. He began to visit often. Soon, he started to help by sweeping out the exhibit hall and cleaning.

Today Max Van Balgooy, who will be 19 in three weeks, is still volunteering time at the Chaffey Communities Cultural Center. Considerably more knowledgable than he was five years ago, he sets up new displays and researches background information on materials donated to the museum.

He is also a sophomore at the University of California, Riverside, editor of the newsletter for his church, works part-time for a local department store, and teaches bagpipes and helps with the halftime show at his alma mater, Upland High School.

But it is his interest in history and museums that has blossomed into the beginnings of a career. 'My goal is to wind up working in a small museum — not as a curator," he said. "That's too specialized. The field needs more well-rounded

Van Balgooy wants to learn all facets of the museum business, from mak ing dioramas, to lighting, to displays, to administration.

He's currently majoring in history at UCR, with a minor in religious studies and history of science. The school has a master's program in historic resources management for museum administrators. He plans to enroll in that program.

Van Balgooy looks younger than his age, but speaks with the confidence and authority of a college professor. Although his formal training is still light, he said he has done a lot of reading and studying of museum theory, and has taken some of his problems to the staff at the L.A. County Museum

"I'm re-doing many of the cases I set up when I first started here," he said, indicating the displays set up around the old Episcopal church building that houses the Chaffey collection.

'Take this, for example," he said. The glass case he pointed to is filled with pairs of lamps donated by a local family.

"Now, this isn't bad," he said. "It has color, and interest. I did the labels for the exhibit, but they really don't tell you any more than what you're actually seeing. They don't teach you much.

He bent down to study the lamps on the lower shelf. "It depends if you want to see the lamps as an art piece or as an historical piece. Personally, I like to know their history or background.

He said the tiny lamps were generally used in a child's room, or as decoration. If he were to change the display, he would include more information, and set up the lamps in a fashion where the viewer does not have to bend over at an awkward angle to see the exhibit.

'I need to make the displays both educational — and entertaining." One problem at the museum is the lack of storage space. Opened 14 years ago, it has quickly outgrown the building. Van Balgooy explained that most museums need about twice the amount of storage area as there is display

'But that situation is almost reversed here," he said with a smile. "We have plans for building another wing, but who knows when that will come

He is currently working on a new case to display a collection of Indian baskets. Nearing completion, the exhibit is admittedly more sophisticated than some of the others in the room.

The baskets are mounted on pegboard covered with burlap, and will be accompanied by a picture of an Indian woman working at the craft. From Van Balgooy's description, the case will be simple, without some of the clutter necessitated by lack of room throughout the museum.

Balgooy has worked as a volunteer at the museum for five years.

Acting Director Beatrice Riggs said Van Balgooy has proved to be in-

The amount and quality of time he gives us is just fantastic," she said.

"He is turning into a real professional. The museum just recently opened for a new season, having changed its hours to Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, from 1 to 4 p.m. Van Balgooy will continue his work squeezed in between classes and other jobs.

He is excited about the next few years. There really is little 'young blood' in the field — people with lots of energy and drive to get things done," he said. "We need more people who are excited, and willing to tote things around and do all the things that are He said he was pleased with the range of experience he is getting at the museum. And according to Riggs, it's an even trade.

Restraining order delays firing of Upland officer

By DINAH ROSE Staff Writer

A temporary restraining order has been filed against the city of Upland and Police Chief Coy Estes to prevent the firing of an officer who married a dispatcher within

The order, issued by Judge Wallace Tashima of the U.S. District Court, prevents the police department from taking action against Officer Jerry Stearns before a hearing on the matter scheduled for Monday.

Stearns is currently on a leave-of-absence with pay.

Stearns married dispatcher Connie Bird on June 29. They received a memo from Estes, dated July 21, informing them of a department policy prohibiting husband and wife from working in the same division. Estes requested that one of the Stearns find employment in another department or outside the city.

In the memo, Estes said that since dispatchers frequently make decisions regarding the assignment of

Included in a list of six potential problem areas was the possibility the dispatcher would not send her husband into a dangerous situation, thereby affecting response times and possibly resulting in injury to citizens or other

He also said the dispatcher may choose not to assign her speuse to undesirable routine calls. The size of the department - seven dispatchers and 34 patrolmen - inhibits the scheduling of spouses on different shifts. Estes said marital problems might affect work output,

Upon receiving the memo, the Stearns contacted attorney Ralph Saltsman of Marina del Rey through the professional association the California Organization of Police and Sheriffs (COPS).

"They have no legal obligation for one of them to give up a valuable property right," said Saltsman. "There's no other job for either of them in the city, so the offer by the chief was an empty one.

He said the only existing opening was for a meter a police officer or dispatcher could reader, and that not be expected to accept a maintenance position. "I've never heard of anything this ridiculous in my legal career," said Saltsman.

Estes referred to the California Labor Code and regulations for the Fair Employment and Housing Commission in his original memo. Section 1420 of the FEHC labor code states, "For business reasons of supervision, security, or morale, an employer may refuse to place both spouses in the same department, division, or facility if the work involves potential conflicts of interest, or other hazards greater for married couples than for other Saltsman refers to the fact the couple cohabitated for about 1 ½ years before getting married, and no problems were experienced during that time. Estes replied that due to the employees' right of privacy regarding discipline, he cannot discuss actual performance, but that he will present any problems, if they were present, in court Monday.

"I think the major point I'm trying to make is that this is not a compatable situation," said Estes. "I have an obligation to the taxpayers of this community to provide the best police protection I can provide. This could affect the service.

"Should the court rule against the city, at least I will have fulfilled my obligation in trying to reasonably regulate these types of situations.

Stearns received a layoff notice dated Sept. 12, informing him that his failure to comply with the options in the July 21 memo led to his termination. He was to be placed on a leave of absence effective Sept. 16 after returning all departmental-issued equipment, and laid-

In each one of those cases, one of them left the department voluntarily," he said. "The most recent was a year-and-a-half ago with an officer and a dispatcher. She (the dispatcher) resigned without anything from the administration.

Saltsman said he was not aware of any precedence for this type of case.

"It reminds me of that scene in Shogun," he said, where the men were all thrown into a pit, and then had to choose which one of them would die.

Cucamonga was originally placed on the council's consent calendar. A letter from company vice president Bill Jahn said the extension was needed to secure financing on the project, and to allow for extensive revisions on the site plan requested by the city's Architectural Commission. Carpenter said he wanted to call attention to the project to determine "if this is really what we want" at the corner.

Plans for the development include two restaurants. two buildings with commercial shops and a two-story office building in addition to an existing service station and coffee shop.

Carpenter was concerned that the proposed lot split into six parcels would threaten comprehensive development of the center. 'What guarantee do we have that if the lots are sold,

School districts say attendance estimates close

By RICHARD PERAZA Staff Writer

Most West End opening week school attendance was within just a few pupils of projected estimates

Only one local school district -Ontario-Montclair School District reported their estimates had proven faulty at all

That error, according to Deputy Superintendent George Duerr, could cost the district about $300,000 in expected state revenue

They (students) started out the first day a little better proportionally than last year but they've been coming in a little slower during the week so I think we're going to end up a little under our projection," he

Duerr said the school had projected attendance at 15,600 students at its 21 schools but so far only 15,400 have shown up. The state, he said, pays districts $1,500 for each child so fewer students than expected can mean a sizable money loss.

Regardless, some schools - Del Norte, Bon View, Sultana and Cypress - are crowded and portable classrooms should arrive for them within a week or two, Duerr

Projections, Duerr said, are based on a school's growth record for the last three years and a periodic survey of new housing in each area.

Because students will continue drifting in for weeks, he said the district doesn't expect an accurate count for about a month.

Although OMSD was wrestling with its attendance totals, it appeared that the Chaffey Joint Union High School District was making rapid progress towardreaching its goal of about 13,000 students.

Things looked "touch and go" for a while, however, according to Bob Erickson, assistant superintendent for instruction.

The district was down about 1,000 students when school opened Monday, he said, and was still down about 500 students Thursday. But a second registration program was scheduled Thursday night, so many more students were expected to be back in school this morning.

Only about 50 students expected to attend the district's two continuation high schools were absent by Thursday morning, but that deficit was expected to vanish by next week, Erickson said. In fact, it's quite possible both Valley View and Mountain High alternative schools will end up with more students that first projected.

We'll come very close to our

Also assists witnesses

total projection if we're not right on it." Erickson added

Mountain View School District in South Ontario reported a record 745 children attended the first day of school, and four classrooms had to be added, either through office relocations or portable classrooms.

Meanwhile, Marilyn Givens, an official at the Upland School District, said the 5,845 students enrolled there the first week are within about 15 of the district's estimate

Mt. Baldy School District apparently posted the best attendance record of all, according to district representative Julie Martin.

The district expected 102 children the first day of school and only two or three were absent due to the flu. By Thursday nearly everyone who was supposed to be attending was present, she said.

Information regarding attendance at Cucamonga School District was unavailable.

The district, she said, doesn't have much of a growth problem and, in recent years, has had more eighth graders graduating than kindergarteners entering.

Last year's June attendance was 5,860, she said.

Nana Downs, of Alta Loma School District, said 4,320 students were in classes this week, compared to 4,300 the district expected to receive and new students are enrolling every Floyd Stork, administrator for personnel and support services, said last year's growth rate was nearly 18 percent so they're used to dealing with lots of incoming students. This year's attendance rate should be about 9 percent, he said.

Stork said district officials are watching class sizes daily, preparing to start new ones as they grow in size. Also, he said, seven portable classrooms no longer needed at a junior high school have been moved to three elementary schools where they were needed to relieve over-

Unlike many other districts, Alta Loma's attendance probably won't level off after a month. In fact, Stork said, it probably won't level off this year at all.

Norman Guith, superintendent of Central School District, said his estimates of 2,660 students have proved accurate. He said as of Thursday 2,650 were enrolled in classes.

Guith said his district is also used to rapid growth now so 10 portable classrooms ordered last year are now in place to counter overcrow-

Coordinator to aid crime victims

Jacqueline Vaughn has been appointed program coordinator of the county's newly funded Victim/Witness Advocacy Program.

The program, which will soon open offices in Ontario, San Bernardino, and Victorville, is funded by a $101,252 grant from the state office of Criminal Justice Planning.

Vaughn, a noted national authority in the fields of victim assistance and compensation, is the author of Victim-Witness Assistance in California, the subject of her doctoral dissertation at the University of California, Berkeley.

Vaughn also serves as a consultant to numerous federal and state

Supervisor argues for annual checks of auto emissions

By DON GREEN Staff Writer

Agreeing that the federal government should not cut off funds to California, Supervisor Dennis Hansberger nonetheless remains a strong supporter of annual smog inspection of motor vehicles.

Hansberger, the county's representative on the board of the South Coast Air Quality Management District, repeated his support of an inspection program at Monday's board meeting.

His comments were prompted when Supervisor Robert Townsend noted Assemblyman Bill Leonard, R-Redlands, is "taking an active role" in a suit against the federal government over what Leonard considers 'blackmail" by the U.S. Environmental Protection

The EPA has started procedures that would cut off $851.2 million to the state in transportation, sewage and clean-air funds for the state Legislature's failure to pass an annual inspection program.

Townsend wondered aloud if Leonard was aware of problems the county has faced in trying to adjust its administration of the federal Food Stamp program and in mandates from the U.S Department of Housing and

'That's a form of blackmail," he said, adding that he also recalled the delay in funding for expansion of the regional treatment plant in Ontario by the California Air

Housing construction plan nears completion

The state Department of Housing and Community Development is putting the final touches on its new $82 million rental housing construction program, which was authorized by Assembly Bill 333 and Senate Bill 229.

San Bernardino County's Office of Community Development will provide information and assistance to local developers who want to participate in the program. The first of several funding cycles is expected to begin in mid-fall. A series of workshops will be scheduled throughout the state to assist local government agencies and project sponsors in responding to the requests for proposals.

Financial assistance from this program will be provided under the following subprograms: The Sponsor Development, Rights of Occupancy and the Housing Authority programs.

The Sponsor Development Program involves development, construction and ownership of new rental housing financed either by the state or a local finance entity in which at least 30 percent of the rental units are available to low and very low income households. Potential sponsors may include any individual, joint venture, partnership, limited partnership, trust, corporation, cooperative, local public entity, duly constituted governing body of an Indian reservation or rancheria, or other legal entity.

Medical center tells of speedier method

San Bernardino County Medical Center has advised physicians they can make high risk obstetrical and newborn referrals to the intensive care units much quicker if they give some advance notice.

Dr. James E. Egan, director of the Obstetrical-Gynecology Department, in letter to doctors throughout the county. advised that some prior notice will allow time for hospital personnel to get the admitted patient immediately upon arrival and insure that a bassinet is available in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit.

The medical center has always been very willing to accept transfer of high risk obstetrical patients and neonates, and the staff is only too pleased to offer advice through telephone is being transferred. This attending staff.

Students pass competency exam

By JIM MARXEN Staff Writer

Students in the Chaffey Joint Union High School District have done well in state-mandated competency exams, a survey of test results

To graduate, students in every class beginning with the class of 1981 must demonstrate competency in four areas

Test results released Monday show 90 percent of the 1981 graduating class passed reading competency tests, 91 percent passed objective writing tests and 84 percent passed the "writing sample" test. The lowest success rate is in the math competency where 76 percent of the students have passed.

As a result of the low math scores, assistant superintendent Robert Erickson said the test will be analyzed to see if its standards are

Of the 24 percent who have not passed the math competency, he said, approximately half have avoided taking the test. The students will be given several chances to take the exam during the school year and a class dealing with problems covered in the test is offered.

Math appears to be a trouble spot for students in other classes as well according to test scores. In the class of 1982, 68 percent of the students have passed and in the class of 1983 that number falls to 53 percent.

Eighty-four percent of the 1982 class have passed the reading test, 88-percent passed the objective writing competency and 62 percent have passed the writing sample. In the class of 1983, 66 percent of the students have passed the reading competency and 72 percent have passed the objective writing competency test. Members of the class have not been offered the writing sample competency

Test scores for the class of 1981 on a school-by-school basis show little change from the district average. At Alta Loma High School 74 percent of the students passed the math competency, 89 percent passed reading, 91 percent passed objective writing and 87 percent passed the writing sample

Chaffey seniors posted a 77 percent success rate on the math competency, 90 percent on the reading, 90 percent on the objective writing and 87 percent on the writing sam-

Sixty-six percent of the seniors at Montclair High School passed the math competency, 90 percent passed reading, 91 percent passed objective writing and 74 percent passed the writing sample test.

At Ontario High School 69 percent of the seniors passed the math competency. That number rose to 85 percent on the reading, 86 percent on the objective writing and 74 percent on the writing sample tests.

Upland seniors passed the math competency with an 88 percent success rate. Ninety-three percent of writing and 87 percent passed the writing sample.

Success rates were low in the district's two alternative schools Erickson's report showed only 20 percent of the seniors at Mountain High and seven percent at Valley View High have passed the math competency. Those scores rose to 37 percent at Mountain and 18 percept at Valley View in the reading test; 45 percent and 23 percent in the ohr jective writing test; and 24 and 14 percent in the writing sample test

Trustee Raymond Sarrio said he was pleased with overall scores in the district but disappointed with the low scores at alternative

Erickson said a major reason fara the low success rate is that many students avoid taking the test. Incl

Thinking about taking a class?

Fitness and dance classes A wide selection of classes covering physical fitness, athletic activities and dance is being offered by the Ontario Recreation Department as part of its fall series of courses. The fall session will run from mid - September through the first week in November.

Barbara Smith teaches Body Conditioning - Stretch and Tone at the Colony Community Center, 1240 W. Fourth St., on Thursday afternoons between 4 and 5:30 p.m. Students of these non - strenuous fitness techniques will require a mat or blanket for floor exercises. The class costs $12.50.

The Recreation Department will sponsor four classes staged by the American Recreation and Education Programs organization. For infants (through age 1) there is a Diaper Gym course in which parents learn to help their very young children exercise. Class is scheduled for Mondays from 9:30 to 10:00 a.m. at the De Anza Community Center, 1405 S. Fern Ave. For two to five vear - olds, there is a class to develop coordination and movement skills. Creative Movement is conducted Mondays between 3 and 3:30 p.m. at the De Anza Center.

Also being offered are two A.R.E.P. gymnastics classes. Gymnastics I, for six to ten - year olds, is set for Mondays at De Anza from 3:40 to 4:15 p.m., with Gymnastics II, for age eleven and up, immediately following between 4:15 and 5 p.m. All the A.R.E.P. classes, taught by Peter Powell, are ongoing and renewable by the month. The fee for each is $13 per month.

Another series of ongoing. monthly - basis classes are the three dancercise classes being offered at different times and locations. Laura Holbrook teaches two Wednesday classes at the Colony Center - one from 2 to 3 p.m. and a second from to 8 p.m. A third Dancercise class is being led by Michele Zeffery at the Civic Center Community Building, 225 E. B" St., on Thursdays between 7:30 and 8:30 p.m. The cost of Dancercise classes is $10.50 per month.

A free - of - charge exercise class for senior citizens (over age 50) continues three mornings a week at the Community Building. Diana Gray instructs between 9:30 and 10:30 a.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, concentrating on improving range of motion, circulation and overall health.

Swimming and other healthful ways of exercising in the water are part of the program in Barbara Tosha's Swimnastics class held at the De Anza Center pool. Non - swimmers are welcome to participate in the classes, which are scheduled Wednesdays from 10 to 11 a.m. The cost is $12.

Eddie Ducharme leads classes in ballroom dancing for senior citizens on Wednesdays from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Community Building. Class fee is $10.50.

A more exotic dance form is Belly Dancing, which instructor Kathy Newman teaches in two Monday classes. The classes, set for the Community Building, take place between 2 and 3:30 p.m. and between 6 and 7:30 p.m. The price for either class is $18.

Michele Zeffery teaches Jazz Dancing for adults on Thursdays from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Community Building This ongoing class is renewable by the month, with a monthly cost of $12.50.

Art tells 6,300 years of history

By GREG JOSEPH

Copley News Service LUXOR, Egypt—The ancient Egyptians believed they could take it with them

The quest for eternal life consumed them.

They prayed to hundreds of gods about every conceivable natural phenomenon, built mammoth temples placing themselves in the presence last - well, an eternity. The ancients didn't live forever but they did have a closer brush with immortality than man usually has. Their art, primarily the earthly remnants of all their failed attempts at eternal life, has outlasted them by eons. As a result, historians have been able to draw a composite picture of Egypt's 63 centuries of civilization by studying all the remaining statues, sacred inner sanctums and painted wall reliefs they could find.

Millenium by millenium, pharaoh by pharaoh, scholars have striven to etch profiles of Egypt as it was, flaws and all. Luckily, the ancients cooperated by displaying their pet peeves and high ideals with equal prominence, in chiseled stone and long-lasting mineral colors.

On a press tour along the Nile we visited Luxor, a town on the east bank of the river. 450 miles outh of Cairo. This was the capital of Egypt at its zenith and the richest city of the very ancient world, a place the Greeks called Thebes.

At the Temple of Luxor, in the center of the city, we admired the handiwork of craftsmen who worked at the behest of Ramses II, a pharaoh who ruled about 3,-300 years ago. Emperor for 67 of his 99 years, he fathered 150 children.

Nabil M.A. Swelim, the dignified Egyptologist and retired Egyptian commodore who acted as our guide, muttered a mild curse as he explained the proclivities of this pharaoh. Ramses II did not give a damn about quality - only quantity." Nabil said, pointing to a row of jammed, mismatched columns. "As you can see he didn't care where he put things. Here, he placed a finely crafted column next to a clumsy one. Very bad, indeed."

Ramses II liked to do things in a big way, in deference to himself and the fervent hope that he would live forever.

Nabil told us about the largest statue in Egypt also, not surprisingly, of Ramses II. It lies on its side now in a funerary temple on the west bank of the Nile, at the necropolis of Thebes, the burial ground of the great pharaohs of the New Kingdom (1600-1100 B.C.). Only its shoulders remain, 1,000 tons of granite. Said Nabil: "This Ramses was so vain. Now he is dead and the gcats use what is left of his funerary temple. A twist of history.

At the Temple of Luxor, Nabil warned us to not be fooled by size but to pay attention to small details. "Every little relief on the walls and statuaries in Egypt has its significance, he noted. "Nothing is haphazardly done.

Nabil, who has a doctorate and is working on another in Egyptology and archaeology through the University of Budapest, spoke from experience. He has discovered two pyramids himself, one of which he believes could be the oldest in Egypt. It is at Abydos, just 90 miles north of Luxor.

'Bear in mind,' he added, "that 75 percent of the temples and tombs from ancient Egypt have not been unearthed yet They are hard to find and excavating gets expensive. Also, some that we know of lie beneath our modern housing. The government simply does not allow us to knock over new buildings to get at old because our housing is at a premium.'

He said scholars who discover the old tombs and temples are really modern day sleuths. Above all, they have to be familiar, with hieroglyphics, the written languave and symbols used by the ancient Egyptians. Hieroglyphics, appearing mainly as inscriptions oh stone monuments, read characters in our tuary hieroglyphics - that we know of," our scholarly guide said.

Shepherding us around the Temple of Luxor, Nabil explained that the original structure was built by Amenhotep III (grandfather of King Tut's wife) and was dedicated to the miles to the north. At one of their favorite deities, and stuffed their ornate tombs trinity of the Theban gods, Amen-Re, his wife, Mut, with enough treasures to and their son, Khonsu. Jury duty: Is it privilege or essential public duty?

By KAREN ALTMAN

Staff Writer When Darlene Peabody received a summons for jury duty in the mail, she was both excited and dismayed. I thought, this will really be interesting," said the 28-year-old Chino woman. "My husband said it will be a waste of time.' She is dismayed, she said,

Darryl Trulin, a supervisor at General Dynamics in Fomona, is uneasy about leaving his job for a stint as a juror "I'm worried if this is a good time to be off, how busy we're going to be," he said during a noon recess at West Valley Superior Court in Ontario. Six years ago, the 41-year-old Upland man was a juror in a Pomona case. "It was a 30-day trial. It was OK then because I wasn't a supervisor and my responsibilities weren't the same.

In fact, Trulin noted, jury duty is an interesting diversion from everyday life.

The right to trial by jury is one of the fundamental protections granted to every American. Every day, in some court of law, a panel of 12 persons decides the fate of

Sometimes that right isn't fully appreciated by citizens whose lives are disrupted by the announcement they've been called for jury duty.

In San Bernardino County, you're likely to be called if you voted in the last election or have a valid California driver's license.

Jury duty rosters are compiled from lists provided by the county Registrar of Voters office and the Department of Motor Vehicles.

Using these two lists provides the largest number of people without getting too many duplications," said Jon Mikels, court coordinator for the West Valley Courts.

With some exceptions, most people willingly serve jury duty, said Mikels.

"I really believe most people see it is a right and a duty," he said. "Some gripe when they get called, gripe when they get here, and then gripe again if they don't get picked for a jury

It used to be fairly easy to get out of jury duty. Until 1976, certain groups of workers - such as lawyers, doctors, nurses and servicemen - were routinely excused.

Today, only peace officers are automatically exempted. The only other way to get out of jury duty is to be a "hardship case.

The Code of Civil Procedures defines these as someone who:

Must provide care for another on a round-the-clock basis. - lives more than 50 miles from a courthouse. - is the sole proprietor of a business and must close down if called to jury duty. has a doctor's excuse.

- is 70 or older. "If you're a big cheese in a corporation, or a judge, that doesn't qualify," said Mikels. "If someone has young children to care for, we'll make alternative arrangements, such as postponing duty until provisions for their care can be made. San Bernardino County requires a 90-day period of service from each prospective juror. However, only four actual appearances - or one completed trial - must be served.

We have about the easiest jury system in the country," said Mikels. In Los Angeles County, you report every day for 30 days. We have you call first and then report only if you're needed.'

Approximately 600 jurors are needed each week in the four Superior Court departments in Ontario and the six Municipal Court departments in Ontario, Chino and Rancho Cucamonga. A master roster prepared in San Bernardino lists eligible jurors in the West End. Names are randomly drawn to fill the year's quota and affidavit cards are sent to each potential juror. To serve on a jury, one must be at least 18 years old and a citizen of the United States. Jurors must have a "reasonable knowledge" of the English language and be of normal intelligence. Blind persons are eligible; deaf persons are not.

If an affidavit card is not sent back, the person is considered a qualified juror, and may be getting a summons card in the mail.

The summons card lists a date and time to appear. It also instructs the person to call a Code-a-Phone number the Friday night or day before an appearance.

If the prospective juror is not needed, he's told to wait for another summons card. If he is needed, he reports at either 9 a.m. or 1 p.m. to the jury room. Since summons cards are sent two to three weeks apart, it's possible to serve the 90-day period without ever reporting to the courthouse. The whole system is geared to produce as little disruption as possible to the schedule of the jurors, said Mikels. "If we know a trial isn't going out in the morning but might in the afternoon, we have the jurors call at 11:30 a.m. to see if they should come in at 1 p.m. It saves their waiting around all morning.

This method still disrupts the schedule of some workers, who need to know if they'll be at work on a given day or in court. Such persons can arrange to report on four different days, such as four consecutive weekdays or four Mondays, said Mikels.

Then, they're at the mercy of the lawyers, who choose a panel of 12 jurors after exercising the challenges provided to them by law.

If a prospective juror is excused from a panel, or a panel is selected before he makes it into the jury box, he goes back to the jury room to see if he's needed for another case. If not, he's through for the day.

Jurors are paid $5 per day that they serve, or part of the day. They also receive 10 cents per mile one way. Many employers will pay the difference between a juror's salary and the court reimbursement.

Questioning of jurors is called "voir dire," meaning "speak the truth" in French. The examination can last several minutes or several hours, depending on the thoroughness of the attorneys and the complexity of the case.

Each side of the case tries to assemble a jury that will be beneficial to him.

'Prosecutors often think the young juror is more defense oriented," said Steve Glasser, who's been a deputy district attorney for 4½ years. "I tend to think the reverse is true. Someone who's lived in Upland all his life might not un-derstand the violent type of crime that occurs in areas such as Chino."

Lawyers often "bump" jurors based on hunches, said Glasser. "We're looking for both leaders and followers on a jury. If you get too many leaders all they're going to do is argue and never resolve anything. If you get a person talking you pretty much can tell where he's coming from.

Attorneys look at jurors' backgrounds, occupations and education, said Glasser. "Once you're convinced someone is going to be fair, you'll keep him.'' Dennis Cole, an Upland defense attorney, was a juror in a misdemeanor hit-and-run driving case 11/2 years ago. The jury convicted the defendant after deliberating two

"I was sure I'd be bumped off (the panel)," said Cole. "I was almost shocked when both attorneys said they'd pass on peremptory challenge. I felt like saying, 'You guys made a mistake! I'm still sitting here!"

The experience left him with increased respect for the jury system.

Jury selection process survives court challenge

By KAREN ALTMAN

Staff Writer

The San Bernardino County jury selection process survived a challenge last week that could have caused major upheaval of the system.

Chino Municipal Court Judge Holley Graham denied a defense motion that the jury roll did not adequately represent a crosssection of the population, specifically in reference to Hispanics.

Chino attorney Richard Caillouette made the motion in behalf of his client, Michael Alvaro Parra, who is accused of a misdemeanor charge of battery on a peace officer.

Caillouette claimed that the county's method of selecting jurors - by combining voter and Department of Motor Vehicles lists leaves out a substantial section of the community.

"When we started picking a jury for the case, I noticed out of a panel of approximately 60 people, only two were Hispanics," said Caillouette.

'I've lived in this area a little while and I know there's a much greater population than that of Hispanics.

Caillouette called a halt to the proceedings by filing a jury challenge motion. Deputy District Attorney James Faust began researching the jury process, finally coming up with demographic figures that showed the Hispanic makeup was 15 to 17 percent of the population in the West End.

Those figures were obtained from the 1979 census, said Faust. A census gathered in 1975 showed twice as many Hispanics, or about 30 percent.

'There's been a tremendous influx of people into the West Valley during the last five years, especially in places such as Rancho Cucamonga and Chino," said Faust. Most of those newcomers were white, he added.

Physicians, pastors combine to create 'wellness center'

By DINAH ROSE Staff Writer

Where do you go when things get hectic at work, tense at home, and you end up with an upset stomach and nagging headache

Should you go to the family doctor for a prescription to calm your nerves? Or to a counselor to help you handle the stress?

A group of West End physicians and pastors are working to provide a service to treat both problems.

Although plans are still on drawing board, the group hopes to start what they call a "wellness center." The center would apply a new philosophy of health that attempts to treat the entire person rather than just the symptoms of a disease or pain.

Holistic - or wholistic medicine supports the belief that the health of an individual is dependent on the state of the mind, body and

The Rev. Richard Bunce, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Upland, serves as a catalyst for the

The concept of holistic medicine actually dates back to pre-history,' he said. "We're just in the process of rediscovering it.

The wellness center would not be primarily a pain treatment center, although people may visit it because they hurt in the mind or The main task is not to avoid pain, but to stay well: Bunce, 41, has collected a 5-inch-thick file of information on the holistic approach, including works by leaders in the field such as Granger Westberg and Norman Cousins

He first became interested in the concept when working with parishioners.

"So often when I'm counseling someone they have so many different stresses in their life that it's obvious even to the untrained eye that it's affecting them physically

He said the signs may range from a flushed face indicating high blood pressure to obesity in a person who turns to food in stressful situations. "It's only a matter of time before that person is victim to a greater problem like a stroke," he said.

Bunce pointed out a trick he uses to remind himself of the relationship between health and stress. The word "disease" can be broken into two small words that say it all - "disease. Sometimes, though, holistic, health-minded people are misunderstood to think all stress is harmful," he said. "That's not true - a degree of stress is needed to acomplish things in life. It's when the stress becomes debilitating that action should be taken. Bunce and others believe that the individual can play crucial role in his own healing by developing healthy life patterns and attitudes that fight stress and psychosomatic

The wellness center that he and roughly 20 other people are proposing would utilize a physician, a pastoral counselor and a nurse to work as a team with clients.

Each client will fill out a questionnaire detailing not only medical history, but dietary, sleep and exercise patterns and other aspects of the individual's life that might influence total well-being. Clients who have a condition requiring immediate attention will be referred to their doctors or the hospital for treatment. Those who are in relatively good health might be sent to groups on nutrition, stress management, or dealing with depression. Bunce emphasized the spiritual aspect of treatment, stating that it also plays an important role in maintaining health.

"Take, for example," he said, "the person who has a tawdry sense of priorities. His goal is to make a lot of money, say

'We can counsel that person for years, and it won't help until he gets a better grip on life and what he wants to be doing and why.

Although everyone involved in the planning stage is from a Protestant background, Bunce envisions the center as non-sectarian, attracting both clients and workers from all

The holistic concept does not reject modern medicene, but only suggests it be tempered by treating the whole individual.

Claremont colleges open fitness center

An outdoor fitness circuit designed to put fun into physical conditioning has been officially opened at the Claremont Colleges. The Perrier Parcourse Circuit is one of 200 such facili-

Cooking class The Montclair Human Services Department has proposed a microwave cooking / food processor beginning in class September. If sufficient registration is received, the 6 - week session will be held in the Community Building in the Civic Center (Benito & Fremont) on Wednesdays from 7 to 9:30 p.m.

Instructor Teghtmeyer will teach the basic principles of microwave cooking using foods such as egg mixers, breakfast foods, fresh vegetables, meats, fish, poultry, and candy. Mrs. Teghtmeyer, an accredited instructor, has taught microwave cooking for the past five years. Each lesson will include tips on using the food processor in preparing foods for the microwave

There will be a registration fee of $15 for the 6 - week session, plus a supply charge of $10.

Those interested may phone the Human Services office at 626-8571 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Hot Shots

Hand crews battle forest fires

They're called "hot shots."
Their job is to fight forest fires, the kind that start suddenly, spread quickly and take hours, if not days, to contain.

The hot shots are the U.S. Forest Service's highest trained firefighters, said engine foreman

About 20 men form a hot-shot hand crew, so called because they fight fires by hand with axes, shovels and other hand-held equipment.

"They're the ones we use in tight situations. They have the most training and experience," said Mann.

Fire season — between June and December is in full swing. The U.S. Forest Service expects between 35 and 40 major blazes this season.

The local branch protects federal lands in both San Bernardino and Los Angeles counties. During the summer, the local force swells to 150 men and women. Approximately 90 firefighters work year-round.

"We add seasonal firefighters because of the large volume of fires during the fire season,"

During slack periods, firefighters are scheduled to work during the day. When a fire breaks out, they work 12 to 18 hours straight.

They're always on call. It takes about five minutes to assemble a basic crew, said Mann. In addition, several firefighters live at barracks in Mt. Baldy Village.

Helicopter crews, dubbed "heli shots," support the ground crews. Each crew consists of 10 men assigned to one of two helicopters.

Firefighting is rugged work, especially in the forest. Firefighters carry backpacks stocked with water, food, a first aid kit, a headlamp and a portable shelter to guard them from flames during emergencies.

A "hot shot" hand crew throws dirt on a blaze, cooling it down.

Firefighters begin a hike to a blaze deep in the forest. Some wear face shields.

Exhausted from their efforts, a forest service crew rests before boarding a bus and returning to headquarters.

Pay raises

They may be sizable though joblessness is up

By DONALD C. BAUDER Copley News Service

There is a stunning change going on in the labor market today: Even in the teeth of virulent unemployment, it appears that wage gains may rise sharply this year.

Normally, when unemployment soars and the labor market loosens up, wage increases tend to become much more moderate, because jobs are harder to find and unions become less militant in their demands.

That's why in recessions, the wage gains negotiated by labor unions tend to to be softer. It's one reason (but not the main one) why productivity or output per manhour, surges after a recession. But it's increasingly likely that the recession of 1980 will shatter the historical pattern. According to a study by New York's Conference Board, U.S. labor costs are expected to rise sharply through the remainder of this year.

What's happening, of course, is that the cost-of-living clauses in labor contracts are beginning to be a major source of workers' income.

Back in the 1950s and 1960s, when labor unions first won the cost-of-living or COLA clauses, they were considered minor additions to the pay package won by the labor union. Now, they are almost a case of the tail wagging the dog.

Importantly, Audrey Freedman, economist for the Conference Board, flatly predicts that next year some large companies will start looking for ways to get out of the COLA contracts - and labor unions may even start to back down, realizing that their members are losing jobs because of the increasing non-competitiveness of American industry

This year, a panel of eight labor experts polled by the Conference Board forecast that first-year wage and benefit packages in major bargaining units will average 9.5 percent, up from 9 percent in 1979. Unit labor costs will surge 9.5 percent, up sharply from 8.2 percent last year.

Productivity, or output per manhour, will fall. It already has fallen by 2.3 percent int he first quarter

Productivity growth has plunged shockingly in the United States in recent years. From 1948 to 1968 it grew by 3.2 percent. Over the last six years it has grown by an anemic 0.7 percent. By contrast, productivity in Japan and West Germany over the same period has been growing at almost six times that rate, or more than 4 percent per year.

It's a major reason why, according according to a recent study by Business Week magazine, the United States lost 23 percent of its share of the world market in the 1970s and 16 per-

Formerly, the Conference Board would poll its panel annually. Now, the poll is every six months, and the current one reflects a significant change from the previous polling.

Then, the panel - comprised of labor experts form major corporations, unions and the academic world - believed that the wage gains would range from 9 percent to 10.5 percent this year. Now the projected range is from 9 percent to 12.5 percent - averaging aout to 9.5 percent, Freedman said.

The new forecast "is much more gloomy" than the last forecast in December, she said. Even a labor surplus won't lower wage settlements, according to the panel. "Now, even the old supply-demand relationship isn't working," noted

On average, workers with COLA clauses get 75 percent of a year's rise in the cost of living, she said. That is, if inflation (usually as measured by the government's Consumer Price Index, CPI) is rising by 10 percent, workers will capture 7.5 percent of that 10 percent.

"The cost-of-living feature used to be a small part of the package. Now, we have institutionalized it.

"Unions want the COLA increase, and also a deferred wage increase of 3 percent over that," she said.

But increasingly, U.S. companies can't compete with foreign countries, whose workers are less demanding. The next step is for both the labor union and management to go to Washington for protection from imports (as is now happening in the beleaguered auto industry).

'What I really expect is that in 1981, some companies will decide they have to get out of the cost-of-living clauses. And unions will realize they have to respond in a different way.

'It's a new era. Unions don't have the strike clout they used to have. The competition from foreign plants, the closure of inefficient plants and the re-engineering of plants weaken their strike weapon. (Companies can close the plant rather than bargain, or move production overseas.)

Jazzercise

One of the latest exercise fads sweeping the county is Jazzercise, which is being offered locally on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings at the Claremont Colleges. Jazzercise is also being taught Monday and Wednesday evenings at the Claremont United Church of Christ, Congregational.

Jazzercise has been called "fitness with a flair," body conditioning that uses jazz dance movements and swinging music. It also has been said that the classes provide cardiovascular fitness and muscular, metabolic and emotional improvement.

Classes are taught twice a week in the evening and three times a week in the morning, and the next registration for a four-week session which began Sept. 3. Classes will be held Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings from 9:15 to 10 a.m. at McKenna Auditorium on 9th Street between Columbia and Amherst Ave. at the Claremont Colleges.

The evening class will be held Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 to 7:45 p.m. in the basement of the Claremont United Church of Christ, Congregational. It is located at 233 W. Harrison Ave.

Refurbished facility to be rededicated

A week-long celebration of rededication to mark the refurbishing of the sanctuary at Faith Lutheran Church of San Dimas is planned the week of Oct. 5.

The sanctuary has been repainted and carpet and pews have been installed for the first time since the church was constructed.

"This has all been accomplished through individual pledges over and above regular giving," explained member Pat Bathke.

The celebration will begin with the 10 a.m. worship service Oct. 5 when the Rev. Dr. Konrad Koosman will give the rededication address. Holy Communion will be offered.

A potluck supper will be served in the multi-purpose room at 4 p.m. Entertainment will be provided by "Come Alive," a group of young Lutheran singers.

Part One of the movie. "Martin Luther," will be screened Oct. 6 at 7:15 p.m. The second half will be shown Oct. 7 at 7:15 p.m. Both programs will be followed by a short devotional service. Refreshments will be serv-

A worship service featuring singers from the Macadonia Baptist Church of Pomona is scheduled Oct. 8 at 7:15 p.m. service with Holy Communion and a talk by the Rev. Mark Wikstrom will be held Oct.

'Me generation' victimizes the nation

By JOHN M. BOGERT Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES - Are you finding it increasingly difficult to get waited on in stores? In general, are service personnel acting rather eurly toward you?

If you answered yes to these questions, don't worry, says a management development specialist. You're just another victim of what has become a major maiaise of our time.

This lack of concern for customers and job is a direct result at the self-actualized and selfecutered 'me' generation." heorizes Carol Sapin Gold, a Marina del Rey-based consultant who makes her living telling such things to major companies across country. Things have changed radically in his country in recent years. Too of us are into the good life the boat, the second house and the social scene.

Somewhere along the line we've our sense of urgency and our belief that hard work brings

The consultant, who built her internationally recognized firm, Carol Sapin Gold and Associates, while raising a family, says excuses for a mediocre position in life are

At the heart of the cure, however, is her maxim, "The secret of success without hard work is still a

"People say you can't beat the system. Others say the field is too crowded to become successful.

"I say, if you haven't contributed to the system, you have no right to expect rewards from it.

The people who don't believe this are the 50 percenters, the people who aren't willing to go all out, to take risks, therefore relegating themselves to a position of virtual

And the reason why more of us don't take chances, says Gold, is the perfectly normal fear of failure.

However, she says it is through risk-taking that we can find more profitable and rewarding careers. It's refreshing to hear Gold say such things can be achieved without

Contrary to what the self-help books of the last decade told us, the stripe of your suit or your powers of intimidation have little to do with achievement, she says.

"If you do climb to your position over the dead bodies of your comrades, who will support you when you arrive?

"For example, say you're bored with your present job. To change it, find out the single task you like best. If you enjoy research most, do more than you're asked to do.

"Instead of stopping at cutting articles out of the paper, dig for background material that you think will benefit your company and help present a heretofore unknown dimension of yourself and your capabilities.

Essentially, this is how Gold rose to her present station, having actually created a personnel training department in a large California-based holding company.

'Another big complaint is lack of responsibility. People say they aren't given enough and that they could do their bosses' job if they were given the chance. What we've seen is that few people take responsibility when it is lying there waiting for them.

"My advice is, take responsibility. Don't ask for more money, ask for more responsibility. The other will follow. For instance, can I do my boss's appointment book, can I do more than I'm asked?

"At the same time, however, you must supply quality service and follow through. We always begin with good intentions and fall down in our consistency.

On the subject of mid-career changes, she recommends a gradual shifting of interests.

She advises people desiring a change not to leave their present career and jump completely into another without first testing the People generally want to leave their field because of stress. If you're in business and want to go into teaching, keep your job and work part time as a teacher. If it's the other way around and you're a teacher, take a summer job in business, test the new stress and ease into the change."

As a note of caution to people contemplating such things, she says you should first feel confident of your abilities within an office situation before branching out on your own.

Looking toward the future, the adviser says "making it in the coming technological age will depend on caring and communication. Repeating a message she's delivered to a number of industrial firms, Gold says recessions will hit those hardest who aren't willing to show concern for their clients.

'We're now faced with a generation of service people who expect customers to be nice to them. I, for one, will pay extra to anyone willing to give me personal

The future will require empathy plus action on all levels of our working lives."

Carol Sapin Gold, management development specialist, says success goes to he who tries hardest.

The Los Angeles County Fairgrounds were all but deserted last week, with only a few dozen workers scattered over 487 acres, left. But the grounds will be packed with people beginning Friday, when the fair opens so workers preparing the grounds have their work cut out for them. He said he knows that once the fair starts he'll have to work 12 hours a day with a crowd staring at him — so he's been training for it by working 12 hours a day since Aug.

After the first five hours, he said,

Mottu said he trains himself not to let anything or anyone in his audience distract him from his work. The glass he sculpts is heated to 2,500 degrees so a slip could be

'You won't see any flowers here until three days before we open and then you can bet they work 24 hours a day," Weiss said.
Outside, the gardening and landscaping section was a mess. Most of the exhibitors tear out the old landscaping and completely remodel each year, Weiss said. He said almost all of the work is done during the last five days before the

He displayed a series of small scars splattered across his chest. 'It (bits of molten glass) jumps on your skin but you cannot stop. The public would get very impressed so you have to go on. Afterward you can go to the corner and take it out. Some of the skin will come with it.

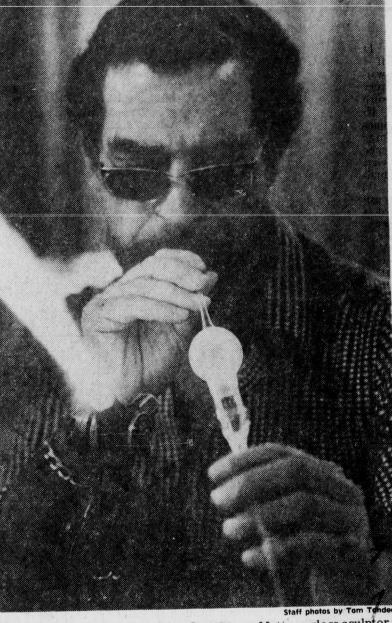

Mottu said he's been working with glass for 40 years, since he was 6 years old. When he's working, he said, the heat of his flame will dehydrate him to the point where he must drink a gallon of water per day to maintain his body fluids.

The waterfall from a Polynesian theme will remain but little else

This year's theme is early California, he said, and most of the plants in the display will be native to the state.

Although carpenters have almost finished most of the basic sets depicting missions and rustic western towns, the huge display room is still decidedly barren.

Workers at the food stands last

He may not wield a hammer but Jean Pierre Mottu, a glass sculptor, must prepare for the fair with the same intensity as construction workers. Mottu, shown blowing a glass vase, said he must work with his flame and glass rods for 12 hours each for a month before the fair to develop the intense concentration he needs to work safely before a crowd of spectators.

The Fun Zone bore no resemblence to the one fair patrons see each year. It resembled an empty parking lot with power cables stretched across it.

'This is a pretty desolate place in the off season," Weiss said. Fun Zone operators work other fairs around the country during the off season and don't arrive in Pomona to assemble their machines until just a few days before the fair.

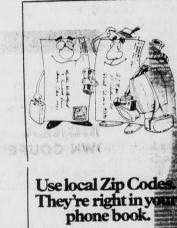

Weiss looked around inside the half-finished remodeling of the fair's old cafeteria into "Mad Dog Dugan's K-O Corral

The general public would really

Orientation staged for new students

By MARGE GROSS Staff Writer

hen September rolls around, it heralds the back-to-school syndrome.

Pitzer College in Claremont held an brientation day for new students and their parents with Frank L. Ellsworth, college president, and his wife, Karen, as hosts.

Gathered in the patio area of McConnell Center on campus, Pitzer freshman and their parents visited together, with Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth. They sipped punch and ate from the mounds of fresh fruit.

racy Smith, 18, had decided on Pitzer because she wanted "a small college close to home." Her parents, Cora and Hilton Smith, don't think Pitzer is close to Portland, Ore., where they live, but it's closer than Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., or Cornell in Ithaca, N.Y. These were centers of learning Tracy had considered at first.

Tracy said she will study for a double major, political science and economics, with her objective to attend law school and eventually 'work in government.'

Joining in the conversation was Molly Bayless, a Pitzer junior, who came to welcome Tracy. Molly's home is in Portland, Ore.

Selma Yonamine, 18, of Aiea Hawaii, told the Smiths and Molly that her parents hadn't come with her to join in the orientation.

The new student said she learned about Pitzer from a friend. She wanted to attend a small and private college. "The University of Hawaii is so big, you are just a number,' she said. At first, Selma said, her parents weren't pleased to have her go so far from home, "but then they said okay." She thinks her major will be in business.

Jennifer Goodman, 18, and her mother of Cleveland, Ohio, were in the orientation circle.

Jennifer wasn't sure about her major, but did know she would double when she finally selects either marine biology, film making, criminalogy or a couple of other

The freshman said she learned about Pitzer through a counselor at wanted a liberal college where I can get individual attention and am free to construct by own majors," she Jennifer said she had been in California before, but never in Claremont. She left behind in Cleveland a budding business called 'Delictable Desserts," a catering service she and a friend had built up by word of mouth.

Looking around for his son was Syd Packman of Carlsbad. "This," he said gesturing toward the chatting groups, isn't for Richard. If I don't find him, I'll just go home. He'll call me or I'll call him."

Richard Backman, his father said, is a pre-med student with his objective to be a general practitioner. "You don't find many wanting to be a GP. Everyone wants to specialize," Backman said looking around to see if he could spot his son. The patio social ended without Richard Backman putting in an appearance.

A teacher in Portland, Maine, was the one who introduced Karen Hathaway to the idea of Pitzer

"I was looking in the West (for a school) and had thought of Pomona (College), but settled on Pazer, Karen's father, Donald Hathaway, had accompanied his daughter from Maine. He said the area is familiar to the Hathaway's since he was in the Air Force and once based in Victorville.

After 'the patio socializing, the parents and students had lunch at McConnell Center. Ellsworth welcomed the group and said 47 percent of the new students were from California, while the other United States "contingent were scattered from Hawaii to Maine, Georgia to New York.'

Thirteen students hail from Belgium, Guatemala, China, Italy. Japan, Malaysia, Mexico, Phillipines and Uruguay.

The enrollment of entering freshman includes 87 men and 110 women, an increase of 27 percent over 1979. The entire Pitzer enrollment is between 750 to 800 students, Anne Maberry, registrar, offered. After luncheon, campus tours were conducted. In the late afternoon, Frank and Karen Ellsworth opened their home for

All during the day, students could be seen lugging big suitcases to the dorms. Orange-shirted Pitzer upperclassmates were helping with paraphernalia and suitcases.

There was an atmosphere of excitement, a few parents shedding a tear or two and evidence of friendships being formed.

Now the Pitzer students are being enfolded into the routine of college life - we wonder if Richard Backman ever showed up to bid his father goodbye!

The Louis Ronfeldt Chorale will perform the medieval work "Planctus Mariae" ("The Lament of Mary") Nov. 2 at 4 p.m. in Balch Hall. The program will include reading of medieval poetry. Admission will be charged.

In Her Image" explores the theme of sacred feminine imagery and motherhood through 100 sculptures, paintings, prints, drawings and manuscripts from both Indic and Christian cultures. The Hindu and Buddhist art of India and surrounding countries on display dates from 2500 B.C. to the 19th century, while the Christian works are mainly drawn from the late Middle Ages and the Renaissance. The exhibition was organized by the Art Museum of the University of California, Santa Barbara, and its Claremont showing is co-sponsored by the Blaisdell Institute and the Galleries of the Claremont

The Blaisdell Institute, an affiliate of Claremont University Center, seeks to increase the understanding of world cultures and religions through the enhancement of cross-cultural communication. The Galleries of the Claremont Colleges are the joint art exhibition facilities and programs of Pomona and Scripps colleges.

Montgomery Gallery is open 1 to 5 p.m. daily including Saturday and Sunday and admission is free.

The agony

is effort, the ecstacy is making the team

Football. It's a sport which demands hour after hour of dedication and toil from its participants.

Ask Chaffey High School's coaches who their star players are and they'll rattle off a series of names that will grab headlines for months but if you ask them who works hardest for the team they're likely to name Allen

Chances are Chaffey's football fans will little note nor long remember Allen, but his teammates will.

Allen is a senior this year but he won't play first string
— it's taken him four years of labor on high school football teams just to get named to the varsity team's second string. An offensive tackle, Allen will probably only see action for a few minutes each game.

It doesn't mean Allen hasn't seen much of a football field; what some other lucky youths have in natural talent boys like 17-year-old Allen must acquire through grueling work.

Most other players on the team began training for the coming season Aug. 20, but not Allen — he began his own training program only a week after school let out last June.

Day after day he and a handful of others lifted weights and practiced their chosen sport, hoping to sharpen their skills enough to make the varsity team.

The labor paid off for Allen — he was named to the varsity squad and issued a coveted "black hat" helmet given only to varsity players.

His coaches say Allen isn't the most talented football player they have but all through "hell week." the first week of practices when two sessions are held per day in 100 degree heat, he always worked the hardest.

This season is probably Allen's last chance to play football. He'll never be good enough to get to the professional teams: it's unlikely even a college scout will pay much attention to him.

He'll sweat and toil throughout the season but fans will probably never cheer his name nor respect his effort.

The tans won't take note, but his teammates will. His coaches will. And when the season ends, Allen will be able to remember the year he gave everything he had for the sport he loved.

Wearing his "black hat," Allen slams into a tackling sled.

Allen, center, listens as Coach Dave Stauffer makes a point.

No. 73 cheers his team on from the sidelines at the season's first
